on Mr. Whitchead's bank. Did Mr. Webber pay you that back?—I got t back. I will explain this matter to you. Mr. Webber was very sick at the time and his clerk came to my office and said that if $1,200 were not paid into Court by noon. Mr. Webber would get into trouble. He showed me an order authorising Messrs. Gilman & Co. to pay to Mr. Webber £350. I went to Mr. Whitehead to see if. he could negotiate the draft. He did not see his way to do it and as it was getting near twelve o'clock I gave a choose myself. I afterwards went to Mr. McConachie of Messrs. Gilman & Co., and tried to get him to negotiate this draft. He would not do so as he did not know Mr. Webber. The gentleman, Mr. Leon, who sent the draft, camy back from Bo neo in April and I received a letter from the Bank saying that the $1,200 had been paid in, I pro-sum by Mr. Leon. Did you say anything then about the other outstanding debts to Mr. Webber?-Not at that time as he was in difficulties. I would not to me that he was in very serious trouble and that I saw Mr. Theop's lotter.

His Lordship -I suppose no valuation has been made of these books?-No, my lord. I think at the outside the whole of the books and facilitare would be worth $500 or $600. They are no use to anybody but a lawyer. His Lordship said the question to be decided was whether Mr. Fraser Smith took possession of these goods under the document or not. The definition of a bill of sale was very wide and although-no one looking at the document would say it was a bill of sale. yet the definition of the Ordinance would appear to include documents of this sort. The Ordinance said that no bill of lien given by the document? -I do not know; sale was valid unless certain formalities had been complied with. If Mr. Smith took possession under this document he did not think he had any right to the goods. Mr. Smith said in his evidence that when he lent the money he asked for security and Mr. Webber and not half so much inse was made about it as It was their practice to manufacture blades and he would give me these gave him a lied on these goods by the document. document was to be considered as a bill of sale or a receipt. He (his lordship) did not see why it was necessary to have such a strict Ordinance for bills of sale in a little place like this as it_ was in England. The Ordina ce here was a copy of the English Act, except that it was even more stringent. Mr. Fraser Smith pointed out that he had stated that he did not regard this document as a bill of sale but as a receipt. He took possession of the goods under a verbal contract. Mr. Mossop submitted that if the goods were handed over under a verbal agreement, the greement was bid, insamuch as, the verbal agreement altered a written agreement already signed: it was an after-breach.

Mr. Smith said at the time the goods were handed over to him they belonged to Mr. Webher, who had a legitimate right to make them over to him in part payment of his debt. Outside this there was still a large amount owing. His Lordship said the question was between two creditors and the Court could not have any leaning towards one or the other, but must be guided hy strict law. The goods had to go in satisfaction of Mr. Fraser Smith's debt or some one else's and the question must be decided by strict law If Mr. Smith was held to have taken possession on the strength of this doonment the goods must be handed over to the other ereditor, but if he took possession on the strength of the verbal agreement his claim was good as against that of the other oreditor. The following despatches respecting the Adjutancy of the Police Force were laid before the Legislative Council on Monday:

Secretary of State to Governor Sir G. W. Des Vaux, K.C.M.G. Downing Street, 8th February, 1890. Sir,-I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch No. 380 of the 19th of December, and to convey to you my approval your suggestion that the adjutancy of the Police Force should be abolished, and the appointmentof Assistant Superintendent of Police revived in its place. 15th May, 1890. Sir. I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch No. 93 of the 8th ultimo reporting the appointment of Mr. Horspool to Assistant Superintendent of the Police, and to inform you that I gathered from Sir W. The term "Assistant Buperintendent" appeara to have been used merely by a slip of the pen.

Mr. Horspool may, however, have some heaitstion in accepting on probation only, an office which would imply a forfeiture of his privileges ss."
